TRANS-PACIFIC LINERS HASTEN AS THEY NEAR THE ISLANDS

WILHELMINA WAS OFF THE HARBOR AT MIDNIGHT, AND THE PACIFIC MAIL KOREA CAME IN AS DAY DAWNED. MANY TOURISTS ARRIVE, LIGHT CARGOES FOR THE ISLANDS. GET AWAY DAY FOR INTER-ISLAND STEAMERS.

Captain Peter Johnson and Chief Engineer Forbes of the Matson Navigation liner Wilhelmina got their heads together on the voyage down from San Francisco and as a result of at least one conference the flagship of the Matson fleet steamed down from Golden Gate to Diamond Head in five days and thirteen hours.

Leaving San Francisco one hour in advance of the Pacific Mail steamship Korea the Wilhelmina officers declare that they were at the end of their voyage at midnight. The Korea was seen from Diamond Head light at early dawn this morning.

The Wilhelmina's haste in reaching the port was presumably due to the fact that the vessel carried the bulk of the mail. The Matson steamer had 241 sacks for Honolulu while the Korea was an additional fifty sacks. This represents a pretty good showing for an hour's difference in sailing time.

The Wilhelmina brought 1600 tons freight for Honolulu and 1400 tons merchandise and supplies for discharge at Hilo. The passenger list included 81 cabin and 5 steerage. In the freight for this port are three automobiles for local importers.

Wireless Operator Stoyan is the proud professor of a new certificate which proves to the satisfaction of the interested parties that he has successfully passed the rigid examination for a wireless expert and operator.

Purser Charles Drew was surrounded by a number of friends this morning and given cordial greetings befitting a benefactor. The affable official wears the honors with becoming grace. The announcement of his engagement and subsequent marriage created more than usual interest among his list of acquaintances here.

Captain Frederickson Gets New Command.

With the arrival of the Matson Navigation steamer Hiloian after a rather slow trip from Seattle, came the news that Captain O. Frederickson, who is well and favorably known to a number of shipping people at this port, has been assigned to a new command.

According to officers in the Hiloian over which vessel Frederickson presided as master for many months, the skipper now trods the bridge of the steamer Klamath, a new vessel which at present is on a passenger and freight run between San Francisco and Puget Sound ports. Captain Frederickson takes the place made vacant by the resignation of Captain Jensen.

Rough weather with contrary winds was mainly responsible for the slow passage made by the Hiloian. The Matson steamer was signalled shortly after six o'clock but was passed by the Federal medical officers and came alongside Hackfeld wharf after seven o'clock last evening.

No passengers arrived in the Hiloian but placed in charge of the off-ed his visit to the Eastern cities on the island of Oahu can be taken to any of the other islands. No soil or plants with soil can be taken except soil which has been inspected and passed and bear a tag of inspection.

The Mauna Kea sailed at ten o'clock this morning with a large number of tourists who intend to view the natural wonder on Hawaii. The steamer was pretty well laden with cargo. The wharf was crowded at the departure of the popular liner.

TOOTED HIS WAY TO THESE ISLANDS

Whistling Buoy Enfranced By Neptune Tales of Romance Comes 2000 Miles.

Wooded by Father Neptune and enraptured by the wondrous tales of the beautifully romantic Hawaiian Islands, an incorrigible, naughty whistling buoy broke home ties at Noonday Rock and tooted its way merrily to visit these much-talked-of islands.

It was about six months ago that Neptune, rich in lore of wonderful tales pertaining to his charges in mid-ocean, imparted to this adventuresome buoy his knowledge of the sun-kissed Sandwich Islands. Day after day, night after night, this charge of Uncle Sam would be comfortably bobbing buoyantly, in the lap of the ocean swells, whistling out warnings to misguided mariners who, perchance, may wander from their paths, to meet with dire mishap, and would drink in the stories, almost fairylike in nature, of romantic palm-fringed islands, virtual paradise in reality. Literally overwhelmed with a desire, as many a person has been, to visit and bask in the fairyland so much talked of, the guardian of mariners would pull and tug at his moorings that were so inconsiderate as to not let him go and satisfy this craving.

Why should these common good-for-nothing drones of rocks, menaces to all sailing craft, be so selfish as to not want to allow him the opportunity of enjoying the call of the wild and romance—him that was endowed with a little means of motion, and these base, dangerous rocks, endowed with nothing but great snags of fangs and teeth, with which to tear and rend any craft that may come near, and draw it under to wallow in its decaying hull. Then thinking of the terrible havoc these monstrous growth-mantled rocks could render, the buoy's conscience would prick him and remind him of his duty to remain and warn vessels of the lurking danger beneath the harmless-looking sheet of water, but the intense desire to behold these wondrous garden isles in all their glory soon overpowered the rabble reasoning of his conscience.

Realizing how futile it would be to break away from his tormentors, who did not understand worldly desires, the buoy took the old rule and strong north wind into his confidence, seeking his aid in escaping to freedom. The north wind understood and lent his help. Had not he traveled through every part of the world and had he not been charmed into perfect bliss by these isles? Of course, he understood. So when a dark, black, starless night came to shield him at his work, he whipped and taunted the sea into such a fury that it never noticed for a long time that the north wind had set free its charge.

The new care-free and happy buoy, safe from his enraged moorings, tooted and whistled merrily across the sea, happy and filled with joy at the thought he would soon see this wonderful island of his dreams. He whistled love chants to the stars and skies at night, and in the daytime he would fairly shriek his joy at the feeling of freedom to the universe. But, alas! unlike most stories the adventures of this whistler did not end happily, for just as he was entering Kahului harbor, the lighthouse tender Kukul, attracted by the joyous toots of a buoy they knew should not be in those waters, swooped down upon the truant and rudely yanked him to her decks, just when he was finishing his long journey of over 2000 miles to witness the paradise of Neptune's realm.

Lying upon the Kukul's deck, the misguided one, with seventeen fathoms of chain attached, which it had dragged all the way, and much scared from the want of attention, the buoy refused to toot any more until his outraged feelings would be avenged.

The buoy will be taken to his Uncle Sammy and then probably back to his old haunt, which he forsook six months ago, to answer the call and be stationed once more to shriek warnings of the dangers of Noonday Rock, just outside San Francisco bay.

The Yale Law School will receive a $10,000 scholarship from the estate of the late Joseph Parker of New York city.
